

CHURN VALLEY HASH HOUSE HARRIERS

Mag No. 1565 THE CARPENTERS ARMS, MISERDEN.
Hares. Gripper aided? by Pickle. Sunday 30th Sept 2012.

What a day!!?? It was warmer than I expected, there were more hashers than I expected but I had forgotten to bring the Bags and the Sheeps hat and I had Willow to haul me around the trail. Forgot to ask if anyone could reset a dislocated shoulder if needed!!

Ah (or is it Argh) the trail! Gripper has not laid many trails and so announced there was not a short trail and he and needed his sat nav to find his way back to the pub, sounded worrying.

A L/M split was instant and the longs soon came to an arrow towards us, "Oh flip" we cried, ignored it and found another arrow this time the right way. A grim warning of things to come!!

A loop around and we were almost back to the pub and hot on the heels of the mediums.

We actually didn't see the mediums until just before the end as they had been led astray by "local knowledge" Carloss.

We did catch up with the walkers, to be renamed the lost patrol later, who were struggling at a river crossing, the bridge being in the next field. Caviar decided to help by hurling Mary T & Clipboard over a barbed wire fence! Some people have a strange concept of the word help.

Later Caviar fell in the mud and got lost obviously Mary's voodoo doll works!

At one point I heard a conversation between Bell End and Gripper. "Going well so far Gripper?" "Yes pity about the markings thought" he replied. Is it me or is that a confused hare!!

We all lost the trail later despite Pickle (joint hare) issuing directions at every possible moment. Was he missing the point too? We found the trail on the road which seemed to go up hill for ever before plunging down into Miserden estate and back up again!

With great fortitude we all managed to find our way home, well almost! The six adventurers of the Lost Patrol were still out there. "Never mind we said, Knackered ex submarine navigation officer is with them all will be well, they can't be lost"

Much later... still not back. Well it's the three pint rule now lads. Much, much later still not back. Gripper goes home Pete Troop goes off in the car and comes back and goes out and, well you get the idea. Much, much, much later almost three pints in fact, they return.

Wild scenes of delight and unfettered joy as Knackered, Clipboard, Poppy, Mary T, Pamela & Georgie returned. It seems despite all odds and mostly no flour they did get lost!!! Still they got back before dark, it was gone 1.30 though.

Some plus points. Joe bought Georgie lunch as it was too late to go home and cook, I got an extra pint while listening to tales of walker's woes. Minus points Knackered only had time for one pint as Poppy had a train to catch!!

Anyway at some time earlier Gripper was thanked for the trail, which was good and muddy and interestingly marked!!

No Bags or Hat due to me. I tried to give the Hat to James but he is away so hopefully I will find, or have found by now, a victim for today's mag.

Down downs to Gripper for his confused statement and new hasher Animal for remarking, "You can do anything on this hash and not get a Down Down" Oh yeh.
